

Democracy at a Crossroads: Regulating Social Media in 2025

> With the public showing growing concern over the influence of social media on elections and democratic trust, a parliamentary committee has convened a public hearing. Their goal: to determine whether and how to regulate social media platforms in order to protect democracy. This includes issues like: Algorithm transparency, Platform legal responsibility for misinformation, Free speech vs moderation, Decline of traditional journalism, Citizen empowerment / participation.

The committee will hear arguments from different stakeholders. They will then issue a recommendation: should stricter regulation be introduced? Or should the system rely on self-regulation, digital literacy, and market forces?

You have been assigned the role of concerned citizen, either as a parent, a health professional or an educator. Your goal is to warn about the risks posed for young people, the spread of misinformation and the impact of young people's mental health.

Democracy at a Crossroads: Regulating Social Media in 2025

> With the public showing growing concern over the influence of social media on elections and democratic trust, a parliamentary committee has convened a public hearing. Their goal: to determine whether and how to regulate social media platforms in order to protect democracy. This includes issues like: Algorithm transparency, Platform legal responsibility for misinformation, Free speech vs moderation, Decline of traditional journalism, Citizen empowerment / participation.

The committee will hear arguments from different stakeholders. They will then issue a recommendation: should stricter regulation be introduced? Or should the system rely on self-regulation, digital literacy, and market forces?

You have been assigned the role of concerned citizen, either as a parent, a health professional or an educator. Your goal is to warn about the risks posed for young people, the spread of misinformation and the impact of young people's mental health.

Democracy at a Crossroads: Regulating Social Media in 2025

> With the public showing growing concern over the influence of social media on elections and democratic trust, a parliamentary committee has convened a public hearing. Their goal: to determine whether and how to regulate social media platforms in order to protect democracy. This includes issues like: Algorithm transparency, Platform legal responsibility for misinformation, Free speech vs moderation, Decline of traditional journalism, Citizen empowerment / participation.

The committee will hear arguments from different stakeholders. They will then issue a recommendation: should stricter regulation be introduced? Or should the system rely on self-regulation, digital literacy, and market forces?

You have been assigned the role of concerned citizen, either as a parent, a health professional or an educator. Your goal is to warn about the risks posed for young people, the spread of misinformation and the impact of young people's mental health.

Democracy at a Crossroads: Regulating Social Media in 2025

> With the public showing growing concern over the influence of social media on elections and democratic trust, a parliamentary committee has convened a public hearing. Their goal: to determine whether and how to regulate social media platforms in order to protect democracy. This includes issues like: Algorithm transparency, Platform legal responsibility for misinformation, Free speech vs moderation, Decline of traditional journalism, Citizen empowerment / participation.

The committee will hear arguments from different stakeholders. They will then issue a recommendation: should stricter regulation be introduced? Or should the system rely on self-regulation, digital literacy, and market forces?

You have been assigned the role of concerned citizen, either as a parent, a health professional or an educator. Your goal is to warn about the risks posed for young people, the spread of misinformation and the impact of young people's mental health.