Jason M. Allen won an art competition with AI-generated image. 1) How it works Tools like Midjourney or DALL-E allow users to create images very quickly by typing prompts. 2) Ethical issues / negative reactions - Value of art is being questioned: everyone can become an artist, so why would people pay for art? - Artists are anxious that AI is going to replace them. - Issue of plagiarism : AI uses already-existing images without artists' consent. 3) People defended M. Allen - AI art still requires humans to type prompts / AI is only another tool. - Similar controversies in the past. Ex : photography threatening art. - We shouldn't blame the technology but the people / companies that misuse it.	There are ethical issues raised by AI-generated art, especially since it is getting better. - Use of data / other artists' work. Issue of consent. - Artists are not getting paid when their work is used. They already struggle to make money off of their work. AI is seen as unfair competition, especially since some AI tools allow users to sell their creation. - Question about the merit of AI art. - Need for regulation to preserve artists.	Evolution of AI art and its impact on the economy. - Questions : <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Will people keep buying human art if they can buy AI art or do it themselves? Human art is expensive whereas AI art can be free. Anyone can become an artist thanks to AI. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Will artists use AI in their work? Which is better? The price of AI art needs to be determined. - Issue of competition : how will AI works of art impact the value of originals? AI art could threaten human art because it will soon overshadow it, especially online. - Museums and art collectors need to think about the value of AI art.	Cover made by AI in 20 seconds (very fast and without any effort) = Illustration of AI being a threat to artists. Realistic / unrealistic? Astronaut walking on the moon = idea of progress / reaching new limits. 1. Progress 2. Issues 3. Solutions
