The Windrush scandal

Between 1948 and 1970, people from British colonies, many of them West Indians, legally settled in Britain without documentation.

They are known as the Windrush generation, after the ship Windrush, which took the first ones across the Atlantic.

In 2018, it was revealed that many of them had been treated as illegal immigrants, and some of them had been deported.

The 2012 hostile environment policy made their situation even more complicated.

The Rwanda asylum plan

In April 2022, the British and Rwandan governments signed an agreement to deport illegal immigrants and asylum seekers in the UK to Rwanda.

In June 2022, the European Court of Human Rights opposed the first deportation.

In November 2023, the United Kingdom's Supreme Court declared the agreement illegal.

Boris Johnson, UK PM 2019-2022

Priti Patel, UK Home Secretary
2019-2022

Rishi Sunak, UK PM 2022-2024

In December 2023, the government introduced a new law to implement the Rwanda asylum scheme.

In 2024, the Safety of Rwanda (Asylum and Immigration) Act was adopted.

In the July 4, 2024 general election, the Conservative Party lost its majority in the House of Commons to the Labour Party.

New Primer Minister Keir Starmer cancelled the Rwanda scheme.

ten executive orders:

- cancelling the Biden administration immigration's policies
- declaring an invasion of the US at the Mexican border, in order to enhance border control using the military
 - facilitating deportation
 - restricting immigration (work permits, asylum)
- obliging state and local authorities to enforce federal immigration policies
- restricting American citizenship to children born of at least one American or legal-immigrant parent (potentially violating the 14th amendment to the US Constitution).
