News review April 7 – 13, 2025

Monday, April 7: Netanyahu visited the White House

ANALYSIS

With Trump's Return, Netanyahu Faces Fewer Restraints on Gaza Than Ever

On the war, President Trump is more aligned than his predecessor with the aims of Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu of Israel and his right-wing coalition.

6 MIN READ

Haiyun Jiang for The New York Times

Supreme Court Sides With Wrongly Deported Migrant

A trial judge had ordered the Trump administration to take steps to return the migrant, Kilmar Armando Abrego Garcia, from a notorious prison in El Salvador.

Jennifer Stefania Vasquez Sura, second from right, during a demonstration in support of her husband, Kilmar Armando Abrego Garcia, in Greenbelt, Md., last week. Mr. Abrego Garcia's lawyers have called his deportation "a Kafka-esque mistake." Rod Lamkey Jr. for The New York Times

U.S. Budget

House approves budget framework, kickstarting work on Trump's domestic agenda

UPDATED APRIL 10, 2025 · 12:20 PM ET 1

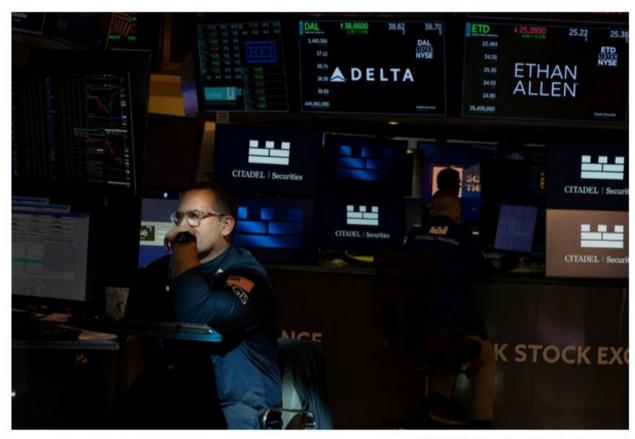

By Barbara Sprunt, Claudia Grisales, Deirdre Walsh

Senate Majority Leader John Thune, R-S.D., (right) and Speaker of the House Mike Johnson, R-La., held a press conference on the Republican budget bill on Thursday.

Kayla Bartkowski/Getty Images

The tariff saga: Wednesday

Ashley Gilbertson for The New York Times

Trump Backs Down on Most Reciprocal Tariffs for 90 Days

President Trump cited new talks with foreign nations on trade in explaining his reversal. But he said China would not be included, and raised tariffs on its exports to 125 percent.

The tariff saga: Wednesday

BREAKING NEWS

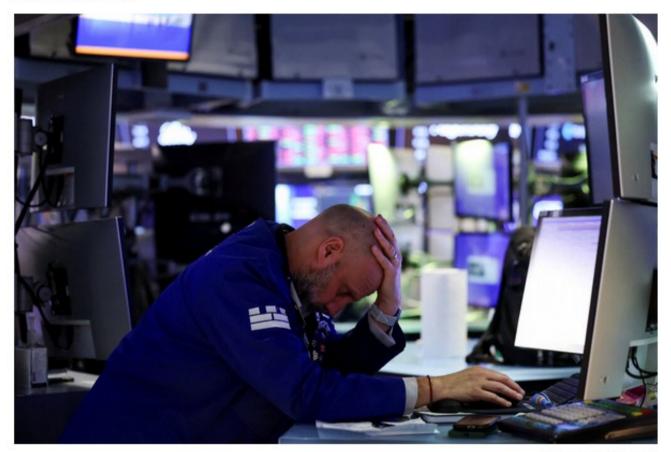

Timothy A. Clary/Agence France-Presse - Getty Images

Markets Soar After Trump Backs Down on Tariffs

The S&P 500 rose more than 9 percent after President Trump announced he would pause most of his "reciprocal" tariffs for 90 days, but economists warned that American importers were not out of danger.

The tariff saga: Thursday

BREAKING NEWS

Jeenah Moon/Reuters

Stocks Dive Again as Angst Rises Over Trump's Trade War

The S&P 500 fell 3.5 percent by the closing bell, erasing part of Wednesday's recovery, as fears grew that the worsening trade war with China will crimp growth.

The tariff saga

Markets Plummet as Trade War With China Intensifies

LIVE 2m ago

Investors' Mood Sours After a Euphoric Day; Bond Sell-Off Continues

The S&P 500 fell 4 percent by early afternoon. Earlier, the White House clarified that the new tariffs on Chinese goods totaled 145 percent.

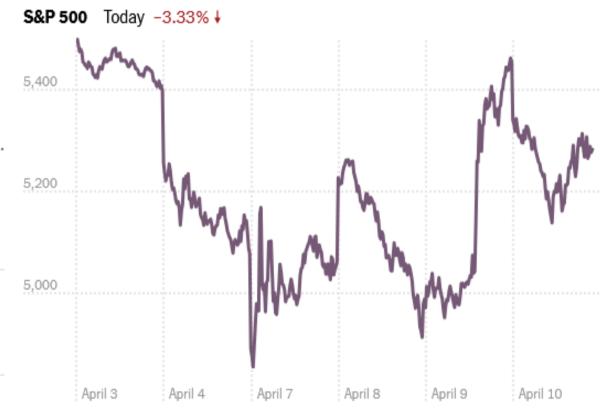

See more updates >

Trump's Tariff Reversal Calms Some G.O.P. Nerves, but Questions Linger

5 MIN READ

Tariff Policy Isn't Much Help

For U.S. Apparel Manufacturers, Chaotic

Data delayed at least 15 minutes . Source: Factset . By The New York Times

6 MIN READ

OPINION

JAMELLE BOUIE

The Tariff Saga Is About One Thing

April 9, 2025

Jamelle Bouie's editorial

- There are any number of theories that seek to explain Trump's preoccupation with tariffs and trade wars. Perhaps he wants to revitalize American manufacturing and bring factory jobs back to postindustrial communities racked by poverty and despair. Perhaps he wants the revenue he generates from large tariffs to reduce deficits and help address the nation's long-term debt.
- But each line of thinking shares an obvious problem: How does one accomplish any of these goals with blanket tariffs that threaten to radically reduce trade with the United States? How do you revitalize American manufacturing if manufacturers can't reasonably import the materials they need to build factories and produce goods? And how are you supposed to revitalize working-class communities if your trade policies will probably destroy as many blue-collar jobs as they might, theoretically, create?

Jamelle Bouie's editorial

• "The fundamental truth of Donald Trump is that he apparently cannot conceive of any relationship between individuals, peoples or states as anything other than a status game, a competition for dominance. His long history of scams and hostile litigation — not to mention his frequent refusal to pay contractors, lawyers, brokers and other people who were working for him — is evidence enough of the reality that a deal with Trump is less an agreement between equals than an opportunity for Trump to abuse and exploit the other party for his own benefit. For Trump, there is no such thing as a mutually beneficial relationship or a positive-sum outcome. In every interaction, no matter how trivial or insignificant, someone has to win, and someone has to lose. And Trump, as we all know, is a winner."

Canada

Allegations of Indian interference rock Canada election campaign

Senior officials warn nations including China, Pakistan and Iran could attempt to subvert vote with sophisticated tools

Leyland Cecco in Toronto

Wed 26 Mar 2025 20.22 CET

Share

Canada's Conservative leader, Pierre Poilievre, has declined an offer to obtain security clearance. Photograph: Chris Young/Canadian Press via AP

New Zealand

'Grubby' treaty principles bill voted down in New Zealand parliament

Bill which sought to radically reinterpret New Zealand's founding treaty between Māori tribes and the British Crown fails by 11 votes to 112

■ Māori MPs disrupt NZ parliament debate on treaty rights changes with haka - video

Māori rights in New Zealand

The Treaty of Waitangi (1840) = New Zealand's founding document \rightarrow it covers issues including land and cultural rights and Māori relations with ruling authorities.

The treaty principles bill (2025) – put forward by the minor libertarian Act Party – reinterprets the Treaty of Waitangi to redefine the relationship between the crown and Māori. Act criticizes that Māori have been afforded different political and legal rights and privileges compared with non-Māori.

Criticism: the new principles would weaken Māori rights, remove checks on the Crown and drive anti-Māori rhetoric.

Māori rights threatened in New Zealand

- New Zealand government = since November 2023, a coalition led by the rightwing National party in partnership with minor parties Act and NZ First.
- Since November 2023: sweeping rollbacks to policies designed to improve Māori health and wellbeing, scaling back the use of Māori language in public services and defunding Māori initiatives

The Observer Children's health

Big brands send out barrage of junk food ads before obesity rules bite

Advertising on snacks rises 26% compared with last year, months before restrictions on promoting unhealthy food come into force

⚠ Young activists in front of a Bite Back 2030 billboard aimed at reducing children's exposure to junk food ads. Photograph: David Madden Photography/Bite Back

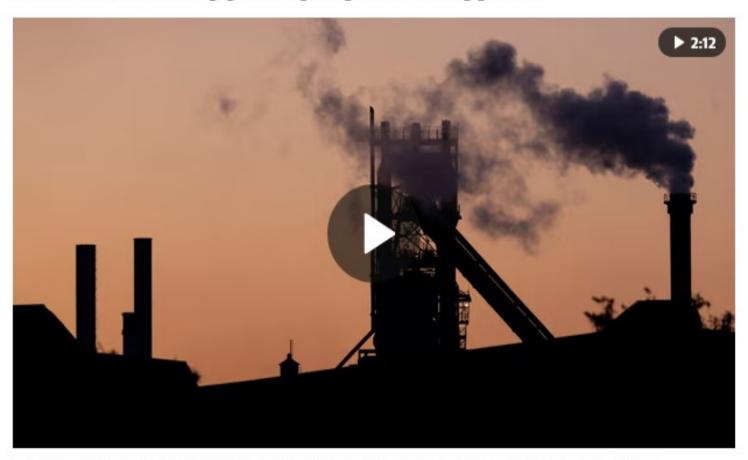

In the UK, from October 2025, foods that are high in fat or sugar will not be able to be advertised on television before 9pm, or in paid online advertising.

More than one-in-five children in England are overweight or obese by the time they start primary school, government statistics suggest. This rises to more than one in three by the time they leave.

British Steel

Bill to save British Steel plant becomes law after king's approval

Emergency legislation giving government power to instruct British Steel to keep plant open passed unopposed

Business secretary says British Steel owners Jingye wanted 'excessive amount' - video

Birmingham

'It's horrible': one month in, the Birmingham bin strike is causing a real stink

Locals are feeling the impact of the more than 17,000 tonnes of uncollected rubbish in the city's streets

Jessica Murray Social affairs correspondent

Tue 1 Apr 2025 18.12 CEST

Refuse piles up in Cheddar Road in the Balsall Heath area of the city. Photograph: Andrew Fox/

Britain Lost Out on Euro Disney. Now It's Getting a Universal Theme Park.

A yet-to-be-named Universal Studios theme park will be the country's largest tourist attraction when it opens in 2031. But studio executives have not yet said which characters will be featured.

Prime Minister Keir Starmer of Britain, center, with renderings of the proposed Universal Studios theme park. Pool photo John Sibley

Crime

Vikram Dodd Police and

Tue 8 Apr 2025 19.39 CEST

crime correspondent

UK creating 'murder prediction' tool to identify people most likely to kill

Exclusive: Algorithms allegedly being used to study data of thousands of people, in project critics say is 'chilling and dystopian'

■ The government says the project, the existence of which was discovered by Statewatch, is for research only. Photograph: Dominic Lipinski/PA

London

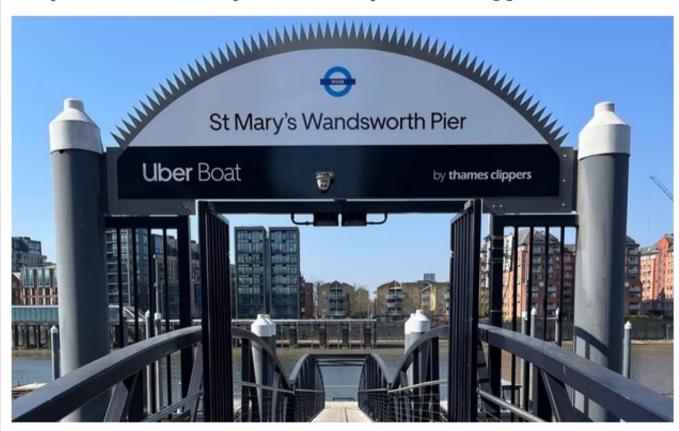

River Thames pier renamed after criticism by anti-racism campaigners

Plantation Wharf Pier in west London is now called St Mary's Wandsworth, says Uber Boat by Thames Clippers

Aamna Mohdin

Tue 8 Apr 2025 16.49 CEST

St Mary's Wandsworth Pier's new signage. Photograph: Uber

Berkshire

Repaired Paddington Bear statue unveiled in Newbury after vandalism

People cheer statue's return in Berkshire town, while two RAF engineers have been sentenced for offence

Jamie Grierson

Wed 9 Apr 2025 14.14 CEST

♠ The repainted Paddington statue was unveiled at a ceremony in Newbury, Berkshire. Photograph: David Hartley