L'année 1866 fut marquée par un événement bizarre, un phénomène inexpliqué et inexplicable que personne n'a sans doute oublié. Sans parler des rumeurs qui agitaient les populations des ports et surexcitaient l'esprit public à l'intérieur des continents, les gens de mer furent particulièrement émus. Les négociants, armateurs, capitaines de navires, skippers et masters de l'Europe et de l'Amérique, officiers des marines militaires de tous pays, et, après eux, les gouvernements des divers États des deux continents, se préoccupèrent de ce fait au plus haut point.

The year 1866 was marked by a bizarre event, an unexplained and inexplicable phenomenon that no one has probably forgotten. Not to mention the rumours that stirred up the populations of the ports and excited the public mind inland, seafarers were particularly moved. Merchants, shipowners, ship captains, skippers and masters from Europe and America, naval officers from all countries, and, after them, the governments of various states on both continents, were deeply concerned about this fact.

Des géants de la tech comme Google, Microsoft ont installé depuis plusieurs années maintenant leurs campus, crèches et salles de sport à Bangalore, dans le sud de l'Inde. D'autres entreprises, comme McDonald's ou la chaîne de supermarchés britannique Tesco, se tournent aussi vers l'Inde pour répondre à leurs besoins en matière d'intelligence artificielle, et ce, à moindre coût.

Entretien avec Jean-Luc Racine, directeur de recherche émérite au CNRS, chercheur senior à Asia Centre.

Pouvez vous tout d'abord nous décrire cet essor technologique de l'Inde ? On parle d'un million de salariés dans la tech à Bangalore, présentée par la presse indienne comme l'un des hubs mondiaux du secteur. Est-ce vrai ou une simple vitrine ?

Tech giants such as Google and Microsoft have been setting up campuses, nurseries and sports facilities in Bangalore, in southern India, for several years now. Other companies, such as McDonald's and British supermarket chain Tesco, are also turning to India to meet their artificial intelligence needs at a lower cost.

Interview with Jean-Luc Racine, Emeritus Research Director at the CNRS and Senior Researcher at the Asia Centre.

First of all, can you describe India's technological boom? There are said to be a million tech employees in Bangalore, which is presented by the Indian press as one of the global hubs of the sector. Is this true or just a showcase?
